My Personal Philosophy

Libraries are wonderful!

Museums are wonderful!

Genealogy Societies are wonderful!

Cemeteries are wonderful!

The Internet is wonderful!

Google is utterly fantastic!!

Internet & Google Limitations

---

Need to be realistic about online tools.

Only a fraction of your family history is online.

Conventional family records are essential.

Note: This overview section is not covered in Dan Lynch's book.

Internet in Perspective

The Internet is simply another resource

Lots Of Resources Hold Clues About Your Family History

All These Diverse Resources Complement One Another

Google Search in Perspective

Google Only Indexes Part Of The Internet

Google's 'bots' only parse standard web pages.
Online databases generate web pages 'on the fly'.

Use All Your Available Resources

Internet works together with traditional resources

Overview Recap

Internet & Google Limitations

Be Realistic About The Internet

Internet only contains a fraction of your family info

Google Only Indexes Part Of The Internet

Google can't search inside private databases

Diverse Resources Complement One Another

Use all your resources for maximum results

Google Home Pages in Europe

Sweden

The screenshot shows the Google homepage for Sweden. The URL is www.google.se. The search bar contains the text "Google-sökning" and "Jag har tur". Below the search bar, there are radio buttons for "webben", "sidor på svenska", and "sidor från Sverige". The "sidor från Sverige" option is selected and circled in red.

Ireland

The screenshot shows the Google homepage for Ireland. The URL is www.google.ie. The search bar contains the text "Google Search" and "I'm Feeling Lucky". Below the search bar, there are radio buttons for "the web" and "pages from Ireland". The "pages from Ireland" option is selected and circled in red. A red arrow points from the text "click here" to the "pages from Ireland" option.

France

The screenshot shows the Google homepage for France. The URL is www.google.fr. The search bar contains the text "Recherche Google" and "J'ai de la chance". Below the search bar, there are radio buttons for "Web", "Pages francophones", and "Pages : France". The "Pages : France" option is selected and circled in red.

Germany

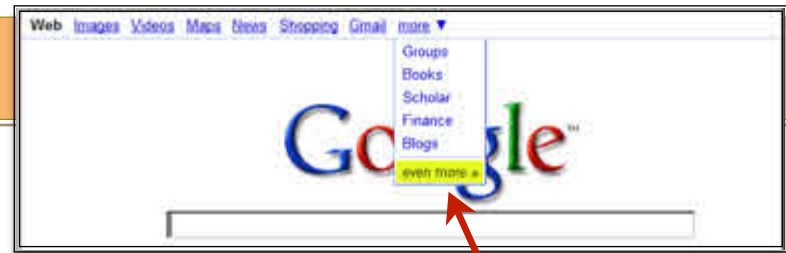

The screenshot shows the Google homepage for Germany. The URL is www.google.de. The search bar contains the text "Google-Suche" and "Auf gut Glück!". Below the search bar, there are radio buttons for "Das Web", "Seiten auf Deutsch", and "Seiten aus Deutschland". The "Seiten aus Deutschland" option is selected and circled in red.

Johann Christian Bach

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Johann Christian Bach (October 5, 1735 – January 1, 1782) was a composer of the Cocowars era, the eleventh and youngest son of Johann Sebastian Bach. He is sometimes referred to as the London Bach or the English Bach, due to his long period living in the British capital. He is noted for influencing the concerto style of Mozart.

Johann Christian Bach was born to Johann Sebastian and Anna Magdalena Bach in Leipzig, Germany. His distinguished father was already 50 at the time of the birth, which would perhaps contribute to the sharp differences between his music and that of his father. Even so, his father first instructed him in music, and that instruction continued until his death. After his father's death, when Johann Christian was 15, he worked with his second-eldest brother Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach, who was twenty-one years his senior and considered at the time to be the best musical gift of Bach's sons.

He enjoyed a promising career, first as a composer then as a performer playing alongside Carl Friedrich Abel, the notable player of the viola da gamba. He composed dances, chamber music, keyboard and orchestral works, operas and symphonies.

Bach lived in Italy for many years starting in 1758, studying with Pietro Martini in Bologna. He became organist at the Milan cathedral in 1760. During his time in Italy, he converted from Lutheranism to Catholicism. In 1762, Bach travelled to London to prepare three operas at the King's Theatre, including Orpheus in 18 February 1762. That established his reputation in England, and he became music master to Queen Charlotte.<sup>[1]</sup>

He met soprano Cecilia Grassini (1736) and obtained her shortly thereafter. She was his sister by eleven years. They had no children.

Johann Christian Bach died in London on New Year's Day, 1782.

Posthumous evaluation edit

Although Bach's fame declined in the decades following his death, his music did show up in concert programmes in London with some regularity, often coupled with works by Haydn. In the 1790s century, scholarly work on the life and music of Johann Christian's father began, but that often led to the exaltation of J. S. Bach's music at the expense of that of his sons. Philip Hipsley pointed towards the end of his J. S. Bach biography that "it is especially in Bach's sons that we may mark the decay of that power which had culminated [in Sebastian] after several centuries of growth"<sup>[2]</sup>, and J. S.'s first biographer, Jonathan Wainman Parry, said specifically of Christian that "The singular spirit of Bach is not to be found in any of his works"<sup>[3]</sup>. It was not until the 20th century that scholars and the musical world began to recognize that Bach's sons could legitimately compose in a different style than their father without their musical idiom being altered or belittled, and composers like Johann Christian began to receive renewed appreciation.

Johann Christian Bach is of some historical interest as the first composer who preferred the piano to other keyboard instruments such as the harpsichord. Johann Christian's early work shows the influence of his older brother Carl Philipp Emanuel, while his middle period in Italy shows the influence of Domenico.

Contrasting styles of J. S. Bach and J. C. Bach edit

Johann Christian Bach

Johann Christian Bach (October 5, 1735 in Leipzig, † January 1, 1782 in London). Milan or London Bach was a composer of the rococo style of the Bach family. He had great influence on the style of the young Mozart.

Life

Youth and early training

Johann Christian Bach was the youngest son of Johann Sebastian Bach and the eleventh of fifteen children from his second marriage to Anna Magdalena, born 1735. From his father Johann Christian may probably be the first musical education. This should, however, have ended in the least fortunate, was highly professional claim as Johann Sebastian Bach, especially in his later years. Johann Sebastian died on 28 July 1750 without leaving a will. In the distribution of the estate on 11 November 1750 Johann Christian received three parts: piano in the amount of the value attributed to each of 50 crowns, namely and 20 dollars cash.

In 1751 he went to Berlin to his half-brother Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach, who then served as chamber harpsichordist to King Frederick II. Carl Philipp Emanuel was his brother out to an excellent pianist, who several times with approval in Berlin concerts. Strong musical impressions received by Johann Christian performances of the Berlin Royal Opera, which at that time lived under the Kapellmeister Carl Heinrich Graun As Hejstle).

Apprenticeship in Italy: Between Church and Opera

1754 Bach traveled to Italy and came in Milan in the service of Count Agostino Litta, that in the connection between him and the court had been reached, can not be reconstructed exactly. The Bern court musician contacts may also have played a role. Litta fostered his prestige and counterpoint with Padre Giovanni Battista Martini in Bologna. To 1760 Bach composed only instrumental works for the private orchestra of his patron. Count especially church music: A trade fair, a Dies irae (both in 1757/58), a Magnificat for double (1758) and a Te Deum (1759) found approval.

1760 Bach became organist at the Cathedral of Milan, after he had previously converted to Catholicism. As a Protestant, he would not have the office (as complete the brother Carl Philipp Emanuel lost the trust with Nancy tradition, is very ill and will therefore have only again sparingly with him).

Besides the work in a church musician Bach picked up, while contacts with the opera scene. As early as 1758 he had written a Singspiel, "Il primo pargolino", in the theatre Filippo Dini who sang first in the opera of Giovanni Battista Desobryou Ferrandini and always had to be regulated. In 1761 Carnival Bach led the Teatro Regio in Turin on the first comic Antropico. It had to be well received, as he once was commissioned to write for the Teatro San Carlo in Naples, first new operas. Called in 1764 (4 November 1761) and Alessandro Melli (22 January 1762).

A word in advance

A glance at history shows us, especially in our fast paced world, as people stood for centuries beyond their community and stand with her and in her life and until today! Church means also always a bit of culture in our villages, church - and it shows the following brief passage duch history - is always a reflection of their actual historical context.

During our tour through the history of the parish mulsum we wish you much fun, maybe a little thoughtfulness and some - possibly new - knowledge.

Another note: In bold words takes you by clicking on pictures or further information. The images can be enlarged by clicking

Source: substantial parts of the correlations presented here are based on the Festschrift for the 1200 - year - celebration of the town Mulsum: 1200 years Mulsum 766 - 1986, town and parish Kutenholz Mulsum Ed 1996

The story so far - no more novel, but lived reality!

766
